The one-time whippersnappers of the state’s up-and-comers have gone grey in the service of party, country, and self – and not necessarily in that order.

Soon the millennials will give way to Gen. Z, as they age into the corroded cocoons of a two-party duopoly that shows no signs – other than through the perpetuation of dynastic reign – of loosening its longtime grip on power.

But hopefully millennials – in the name of freshening the state’s political atmosphere – give us a governor or a senator before too long; or maybe two or three, before absorbing the next generation’s energy.

Maybe that person or people resides somewhere on the annual InsiderNJ Millennial list that follows.

The sprites of yesteryear have become the craggy veterans of the present era, and what they do next in terms of power projection intrigues.

Take a look.

Maybe someone here stands on the cusp of a governorship long ravenously guarded by older generations.

A little wiser with the passage of time, the vision tempered perhaps, battered maybe but young yet, at least compared to the aged charioteers in front of them, within find the leaders of today, yes – and tomorrow.

1. MATT PLATKIN

After serving in an acting capacity for most of 2022, now-Attorney General Platkin was confirmed by the Senate in September, following his nomination by Governor Phil Murphy. An early member of the Governor's campaign team and inner circle from the early days of the 2017 campaign, Platkin, in his mid-thirties, became one of the Governor's most-trusted legal advisors and served as Chief Counsel before departing for the private sector. Platkin re-entered the realm of public service upon his appointment as Acting Attorney General – and nomination and subsequent confirmation – giving Platkin the distinction of becoming the youngest Attorney General in New Jersey history, as well as being among the youngest in the nation at the present time. As the top law enforcement official in the state, Platkin wields tremendous influence in shaping the implementation of a wide range of policies affecting the entire population, among them: criminal justice reform, social justice, gun violence prevention.

“However beautiful the strategy, you should occasionally look at the results.”

2. ANDY KIM

Seeking his third term in the general election this year, Kim is still a relatively young Congressman nationwide and is the youngest in New Jersey, and is uniquely positioned to be a champion for youth issues statewide and nationwide. First elected by a narrow margin in 2018 in the ‘blue wave’ election, defeating incumbent Tom MacArthur, Kim is facing stronger headwinds this year, as he faces a challenge from Republican candidate Bob Healey – also a young candidate, making the CD3 matchup the only congressional contest in the state between two between two millennial candidates.

3. BRITNEE TIMBERLAKE

One of the youngest Assembly members, Essex's Timberlake has been on the forefront of post-COVID policy issues, including housing, foreclosure prevention, and economic parity. Post-redistricting, the Assemblywoman is poised to enter the Senate after next year's elections, where she would be among the chamber's youngest members.

4. RAJ MUKHERJI

The veteran legislator and former Jersey City Deputy Mayor – in his late 30s – is poised to enter the Senate next year in the newly re-configured 32nd Legislative District. At that point, he will have been in the legislature for nearly ten years – and yet will still remain one of its youngest members.

5. FABIANA PIERRE-LOUIS

Confirmed in 2020, Pierre-Louis became the youngest Associate Justice on the state Supreme Court and the first African-American woman to sit on the bench of New Jersey's highest court. Pierre-Louis' confirmation marked a generational change on the court, where she stands poised to have an impact for years to come.

7. RACHEL WAINER APTER

Though she hasn't been confirmed – yet – Governor Murphy's nomination of Wainer Apter marks his second nomination of a younger person to the state Supreme Court, following Fabiana Pierre-Louis in 2020. Should she be seated on the court, Wainer Apter is poised to shape the state's legal landscape for decades.

8. BOB HEALEY

The former punk rocker and yacht-builder defeated Ian Smith in the GOP primary earlier this year for the right to take on incumbent Democratic Rep. Kim in the 3rd District. Healey, in his late 30s, is among the younger generation of Republican congressional candidates nationwide this year, and his campaign is on the radar of the NRCC and other national organizations. The Healey v. Kim matchup gives New Jersey its only congressional contest between two millennial candidates.

11. BRANDON UMBA

The former Lumberton business administrator ran, and won, for Assembly last year with Michael Torrissi and Jean Stanfield in the battleground LD8. Umba's election to the Assembly represents the continuation of younger Burlington County Republicans representing the district, following in the footsteps of former Assemblyman Ryan Peters and Assemblywoman Maria Rodriguez-Gregg.

12. STEPHANIE LAGOS

First Lady Tammy Murphy's Chief of Staff is an influential voice in Trenton and around the state, and earlier this year served as the youngest member of the state's Congressional Redistricting Commission, helping to shape the congressional districts for the next decade.

13. JUSTIN MUSELLA

The Parsippany Republican is an avid campaigner, and his skills and dedication delivered him a Republican primary victory for council last year and subsequent general election victory in a Morris County town that had been trending Democratic in recent years. His work and campaign ethic has caught the attention of NJGOP bigwigs, who continue to headline fundraisers for Musella.

14. TONY PERRY

Having won re-election last year by a 2-to-1 margin, and securing a fourth year as Middletown Mayor, and among his priorities this year has been to create a 'Next Generation Support Program' for students post-COVID. The former Chief of Staff to former Senator Kyrillos is a rising star in statewide Republican circles, and would be a formidable candidate for higher office in the future.

15. ASHLEY FELICE

A rising star in Republican circles, Felice was selected as mayor of Chatham Township earlier this year, returning the government to Republican control after Democrats had made in-roads there.

16. NOHEMI SORIA-PEREZ

The Camden native serves as Chief of Staff to the LD5 legislators and won election to the council last year. A first-generation Mexican-American and the first to serve on the city council, she is an advocate for the city's Latino community and a founding member of the 'Campaign For Great Camden Schools'.

17. MIKE CRISPI

The podcast host, who once ran for Morris County freeholder, primaryed veteran Republican Congressman Smith earlier this year, and had allies of former President Trump in his corner, including Roger Stone. Crispi ran county candidates alongside him on the ‘America First’ slogan, exhibiting no fear in taking on the Republican establishment in the district. While he came up short in the primary against an entrenched incumbent, Crispi says he plans to run again in 2024.

18. SADAF JAFFER

The former Montgomery Township Mayor was elected in battleground 16th Legislative District in 2021, becoming one of the youngest legislators in the Assembly and its first South Asian woman in the Legislature.

19. SAM JOSHI

Having won a hard-fought Democratic primary and general election last year, Joshi took the helm as Mayor of Edison in January. Joshi has made it a priority to work towards bridging the generational divide in the state’s fifth largest municipality as well as encouraging youth to become involved in public service.

20. MATT ANDERSON

The Monmouth-based operative recently joined Hoboken Strategy Group, and is the founder of Millennials For NJ, along with board members Rebecca Schwartz, Matt Clarkin, Kaylee McGuire, and Juan Carlos Nordelo. The bipartisan PAC, launched several years ago, continues to boost and raise money and support for young candidates, both Republicans and Democrats.

21. MICHAEL DELAMATER

The respected operative and former Intergovernmental Affairs Director for the Governor's Office won the Morris County Democratic Vice Chairmanship earlier this year, alongside new Chairwoman Amalia Duarte, and is a key player in Morris County, and statewide, politics.

22. ZACHARY DOUGHERTY

The Monmouth County native and college student has been a leader on anti-gun violence initiatives and this year spearheaded a legislative effort to establish the NJ Legislative Youth Council. Dougherty says to his fellow students, “if you’re crazy enough to think you can change the world, you’re exactly who the world needs”

23. AMBER MURAD

A rising star, the Somerset County Republican nearly won a commissioner seat in last year's razor-thin county commissioner's race, and is pursuing a commissioner seat again this year.

24. PARIMAL GARG

The Chief Counsel to Governor Phil Murphy, who took the position upon the departure of Matt Platkin, is a critical voice in shaping the Governor's policy agenda and his executive orders.

25. KATIE CERICOLA

The founder of the 'Millennial Minute' podcast and former Bergen County Republican Commissioner candidate secured election last year to the Waldwick council, making her one of the youngest Republican female elected officials in the state.

26. CHIGOZIE ONYEMA

The former NJDCA Deputy Commissioner and NJ Institute For Social Justice attorney, who first ran for office at age 18 for Board of Education, made a strong play for Newark's West Ward council seat earlier this year, forcing a runoff with the establishment-backed candidate.

27. KAITLYN WOJTOWIC

The former New Jersey chapter director of the New Leaders Council serves as Vice President of the Planned Parenthood Action Fund, putting at ground zero of an issue that's become central to the 2022 midterm elections.

28. SAM DEALMEIDA

With both lobbying and labor credentials, as well as an attempt for Assembly in 2019 in part aimed at increasing representation for younger voices, DeAlmeida has quickly risen through the ranks in the labor world, serving as ABC-NJ President.

29. LAMONICA MCIVER

The Newark Central Ward Councilwoman is the youngest elected official on the city's governing body, and earlier this year was elevated to the role of Council President.

And so do we.

We're Capital Health. A hospital made better by doctors and nurses and staff who have left other hospitals for a place where they can do better work. The work that inspired us to become doctors and nurses in the first place.

Where we collaborate across disciplines for smarter, more informed care. Where we're structured to meet with patients longer. To the care that earned us "LGBTQ+ Healthcare Equality Leader" designations from the Human Rights Campaign Foundation for equitable treatment and inclusion of LGBTQ+ patients, visitors and employees. To working with a robust network of community partners that serve the City of Trenton through our Institute for Urban Care.

To a place where we can do whatever it takes to get her the best care.
